What is a Cookie?

A cookie is a small text file stored on your device by websites you visit. It helps websites remember your preferences, track site usage, and enable certain features. If cookies are not available, an anonymous identifier – a randomly generated string – may be used for similar purposes.

Only the website that generated the cookie can access its stored information, and cookies cannot retrieve data beyond what the user has provided. More details about cookies can be found here.

Why We Use Cookies?

We use cookies to optimize website navigation and improve our services. Depending on your location, cookies may require explicit consent before being stored on your device.

Duration of Cookies

Session (Transient) Cookies

Stored temporarily during browsing and deleted when you close your browser. These cookies allow smooth navigation across web pages without re-authentication.

Persistent (Permanent) Cookies

Remain stored after closing your browser and are used for preferences, analytics, and personalized experiences. Retention varies but does not exceed 13 months.

Types of Cookies We Use:

- Essential cookies – Required for core website functions, such as authentication and security.
- Strictly necessary cookies – Enable critical features like secure logins and session management.
- Performance cookies – Help analyze user interactions to improve website functionality.
- Functionality cookies – Remember user preferences, such as language and region settings.

Cookies Used by Us and Trusted Third Parties

Performance

Google Analytics – Collects anonymized data on site usage to improve customer experience and ad targeting. More details on their privacy policy can be found here.

Strictly necessary

Gutenberg Technology – Uses cookies to enable platform functionalities without sharing or selling collected data to third parties. Jira – Provides customer support and tracks service issues. Their cookie policy is available here.

Managing Cookies

You can accept or decline cookies via browser settings or our website's cookie preference panel. If cookies are disabled, certain features may not function optimally. For global opt-out options, visit Your Online Choices.

Legal Compliance

We comply with applicable data protection laws, including but not limited to the GDPR (Europe) and CCPA (California). Depending on your location, you may have rights related to cookie use, such as opting out of tracking and requesting data deletion. Please refer to our Privacy Policy for further details.

Policy Updates

We may update this Cookie Policy to reflect legal and operational changes. Please check this page periodically for the latest information.
